THE MAGIC GROUP RECOMMENDS INSPIRETEK

"The Inspiretek platform looks at what it means to be a serious athlete, building resilience and giving yourself permission to practice good self-care.

There is a strong link between exercise and maintaining wellbeing.

Evidence suggests that just 10 minutes of activity can change our physical health by boosting our energy levels and making us more alert.

Physiologically it also releases endorphins, which are the body's feel-good chemicals. This is not all; exercise can support our mental health too by improving our mood and helping us cope with stress and anxiety.

However, playing sport as a serious athlete is different.

Exercise for you as an elite athlete is an integral part of your regime; a regime that focuses on you being a high achiever and being the best at your sport. This comes with pressure that can impact on your mental health and wellbeing, which can subsequently impact on your performance and that of your team. The drive to achieve may lead you to place additional pressure on yourself, and alongside the expectations of coaches and team members, this can leave you in a vulnerable position and feeling isolated.

In addition to this, your identity is likely to have a strong link with your sport. Being an NPL FOOTBALL player can become an essential part of how you see yourself and how you believe others see you. Surveys have found, four out of ten respondents said they feel like they were known for their Football rather than for them as a person. When playing Football becomes your only identity, leaving limited space for other activities and interests, problems can arise.

The potential for injury is a feature of playing a contact sports like Football. If an injury occurs, or a less than perfect performance is given, your mental health and wellbeing can be affected.

Players feel isolated when they're injured and seven out of ten get 'really upset' when they are not selected to play. These feelings can become more of an issue if the game is the only focus in your life.

Prevention is key in maintaining good health and wellbeing. Preventative action helps build resilience to cope in stressful and pressured situations when they arise.

The strategies and tools provided by the Inspiretek platform in combined with the collaboration of Inspiretec staff with the Coaches will assist these young athletes holistically in their journey to become the 'best they can be' "
